MISS STUART GOES TO LARGER FIELD

Manager of Ulster County Home Bureau Resigns to Accept Similar Position in Much Larger Field in Massachusetts.

The resignation of Miss Lillian M. Stuart from the position of manager of the Ulster County Home Bureau was announced by the president of that organization at the annual meeting, held in Wiltwyck Inn, this afternoon. The resignation, which will go into effect on February 1, was given to the executive committee and regretfully accepted some time ago, announcement being withheld until the annual meeting today.

Miss Stuart resigns in order to accept a similar position in Springfield, Mass., where she will be in charge of home economics work in Hampden county, with several assistants under her direction. In Hampden county there is a county chamber of commerce of which the farm bureau is a part. Home bureau work has not been featured in the past but a more active line of work has been decided on and it will be Miss Stuart's position to direct this work.

Miss Stuart came to Kingston in September, 1917, when the federal government was organizing women as a war work in conservation of food supplies, etc. There was no Home Bureau or other organization of women in connection with the Farm Bureau. The Ulster County Home Bureau was organized by Miss Stuart and has grown steadily in membership and usefulness. In 1920 it had 1,404 members and the reports this year will show a further increase. The personality of Miss Stuart, her untiring industry, tactful methods and constantly growing efficiency have been largely responsible for this success

FAIR IN FULL BLAST.

Splendid Display of Hand-Made Goods At Holy Cross House.

The fair for the benefit of the community work done at Holy Cross Parish House on Pine Grove Avenue opened Tuesday afternoon with a splendid display of hand-made goods. The whole Parish House is being used, while on one side of the auditorium have been built beautifully decorated booths in which the goods are on display. Many interesting features were prominent in the decoration but some of the booths that attracted especial comment were the blue and yellow booth in which refreshments were served, the rainbow booth, the Rose Garden in which the candies were sold, the Christmas booth where the fancy articles were on display, the French Gray where beautiful clothes for children were sold.

Another remarkable feature of so large a fair was the fact that absolutely everything for sale was was hand-made; the refreshments, the candies, the clothes, the fancy work, the ward robes for the two hundred beautiful dolls, the numerous beautiful toys that have been imported from abroad and given by an interested friend, the rugs, the quilts, the aprons, the canned fruit, and the other articles for sale. For variety and reasonable prices there are many chances for the Christmas shopper.

A delicious salad supper was served throughout the first evening, while dancing was enjoyed until the midnight hour. The fair will continue tonight and Thursday afternoon and night; and new articles will be added every day. Music by Balfe's orchestra will furnish opportunity for dancing on both evenings.

MARLBOROUGH ROBBERY.

Romer Roe's Summer Home Is Ransacked.

The summer home of Romer Roe at Marlborough was entered and robbed and the thief escaped without leaving a clue. The house had been closed since the owner went to New York for the winter and when Mrs. Pearl Brewer, who lives nearby and looks after the place, noticed the doors open recently, she suspected something was wrong and making an investigation found that the house had been rifled. Some jewelry was taken, also two dress suits, about $16 worth of silver and perhaps other things. The drawers of the bureaus had been pulled out and ransacked. It is thought that the person who robbed the house must have some inside knowledge of the place and may possibly be the same man who robbed it last winter, and possibly on other occasions.

Albany Avenue Baptist Church.

The annual roll call meeting of the Albany Avenue Baptist Church will be held on Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Every member of the church as far as possible should be present, and all members of the congregation with their families and friends are likewise invited. An interesting program will be followed by a social hour during which refreshments will be served. These roll call meetings are always notable occasions and this promises to be one of the best. All members who have joined the church during the past year should be present without fail.

Entertains On Birthday.

D. W. Mathews celebrated his birthday anniversary Tuesday at his home 249 Pearl street, entertaining a number of friends and relatives during the afternoon.

STONE RIDGE WINS FIRST PLACE

And Home Bureau Banner With New Paltz Second, Plattekill Third, Asbury Fourth—15 Communities On Honor List—Total of 1,370 Members For County.

Mrs. William Warren, county chairman of the Home Bureau, relieved all anxious minds at the Home Bureau annual meeting this afternoon when she presented in a charming manner the much coveted Home Bureau banner to Stone Ridge, meanwhile commenting upon the splendid Home Bureau work the Stone Ridge bureau had always done. Amid much applause Mrs. C. C. Hardenburgh, chairman Stone Ridge Home Bureau, accepted the banner for her community very gracefully and with a few well chosen words of thanks to Mrs. Warren and the women of Stone Ridge who had secured that banner by zealous campaigning. This is the first year that the Rondout valley has won the banner as Ardonia and Modena have always had it heretofore.

Following the presentation of the banner, Mrs. Warren read the Home Bureau honor list which was displayed at the meeting. This honor list includes every community that has equaled or exceeded its quota and is as follows:

BURGLARIZE THE HOFFMAN HOME

Residence of Ex-Sheriff on Washington Avenue Entered on Tuesday and Jewelry Stolen—Only Robbery Reported That Day.

Early Tuesday afternoon Ex-Sheriff Henry J. Hoffman and his family left his home at No. 317 Washington avenue to take part in the bridge celebration festivities. The house was securely locked.

When the family returned about 4:30 o'clock that afternoon they found that some one had entered the house and ransacked it. Entrance had been secured by breaking the glass in a rear door and inserting a hand and unlocking the door.

The thief had gone through the house ransacking it in the search for valuables. The police were notified, and are making an investigation.

This was the only robbery reported to the police that day. The articles stolen were listed by the police as follows:

One Princess dinner ring with seven diamonds; one Sunburst brooch with seven diamonds, size ½ carat; three loose diamonds, one large and two small; lady's gold hunting case watch on pin, Elgin movement, engraved on back, plain on front; five gold rings, no settings; one pair ear-rings without stones; large pink cameo breast pin with white head; one $1.00 gold piece; one $2.50 gold piece with initials H. J. H.; one brown shirt with white pin stripe, size 15½.

TEN THOUSAND HEAR GOVERNOR AT RONDOUT CREEK BRIDGEHEAD

Parade Pleased Him and Walk Over Bridge Was of Great Interest—Fireworks of Esopus People Came Up to Expectations.

The parade preceding the formal ceremonies attending the opening of the Rondout Creek Bridge on Tuesday afternoon was one of the largest held in Kingston in many years and throughout the line of march, from the armory to the bridge, there was continuous applause from the crowds which thronged the sidewalks.

A detail of state troopers, mounted, led the parade, followed by a detail of the city police, Company M and the various organizations in the formation heretofore published.

Governor Miller and the other members of the official party reviewed the parade from a stand erected on the city hall lawn. Every organization as it passed the reviewing stand uncovered to the governor or saluted, and he returned the salute. Whenever in the parade the American flag was displayed, the governor and members of the official party on the reviewing stand stood with bared heads until the colors had passed.

Governor Miller was particularly impressed with the number of pupils from the city schools and their appearance. By the time they reached the stand the head of the parade was slowing up in order to make proper formation on either side of Wurts street, approaching the bridge, and the pupils of the various schools frequently were compelled to slacken their pace and several times to halt. On each occasion Governor Miller waved and smiled to the pupils, and invariably returned their salutes.

Governor Miller and his party brought up the rear of the parade, escorted by four mounted state troopers, and passed through open ranks down Wurts street to the speaker's stand at the bridge, the automobiles conveying the official party discharging their guests a block above Abeel street and the remainder of the trip to the stand being made on foot.

At the conclusion of his speech at the bridge, Governor Miller accompanied Mayor Canfield some distance out on the bridge and posed for the camera men from New York city and elsewhere who were most desirous of obtaining pictures showing them and the superstructure of the bridge.

Governor Miller and Mayor Canfield and other members of the official party continued their walk across the bridge to the Esopus side, the governor displaying great interest in every detail of bridge construction and unalloyed admiration at the magnificent view obtainable from the center of the bridge.

State Troopers were stationed at frequent intervals along the footpaths on either side of the bridge in order to keep them clear and thus avoid accidents, and a detail of troopers also followed the official party, followed in turn by throngs which swarmed on the bridge as soon as opportunity was afforded them. After viewing the rock cut and highway under construction on the Esopus side, Governor Miller and members of his party returned to the Kingston side, piloted safely through the crowd by the troopers.

A Sea of Humanity.

Long before the mammoth parade reached the bridge the crowds began to gather on Abeel street, and the special policemen on duty at the bridge in charge of Police Sergeant Hanley stretched ropes to keep the roadway on Wurts and Abeel streets open.

After Governor Miller had been escorted to the speakers' stand the open spaces were allowed to fill and thousands were packed into one huge sea of humanity that stretched from the bridge head up Wurts street to just beyond where West Union street crosses Wurts.

So tightly were the crowd packed in that they overflowed the sidewalks and swept up in a wave against the sides of the houses on the one side of the street and were pressed against the brick walls of the Rondout Presbyterian Church on the other side of the street. Lawns and fences were hidden from view.

Red Hats Are Popular.

It was an inspiring sight to see that vast sea of faces for all that could be seen was faces and hats. So tightly was the crowd packed into a compact mass that if it had rained, few drops would have sifted through to the pavement. It is estimated there were 10,000 persons in the crowd.

Gazing over the sea of faces it was brought forcibly to mind that this season's favorite color in ladies' hats is red. A glance over the huge audience brought out the fact that two out of every three hats worn was red in color. Blue ran a bad second.

Swarmed Over the Bridge.

At the close of the exercises at the bridge head the barriers were removed and the crowd allowed to cross for the first time over the new bridge. Fully ten thousand people seized the opportunity afforded and walked across the structure that now links Kingston with the town of Esopus.

As one stood off to one side below the bridge and cased up it looked like a vast sea stream of black surging in a resistless wave over the bridge.

It is hardly likely that the bridge will ever receive a more severe test or a heavier load to carry.

Largest Since 1909.

Incidentally it might be well to say that this bridge is the largest suspension bridge built in this county since 1909.

Fireworks Were Good.

Many remained at the bridge after Governor Miller's address waiting for the fireworks to be set off on the Port Ewen side of the bridge, and thousands who had crossed the bridge remained on the other side to see the program.

This was the first that the majority of those who had crossed the bridge received an inkling as to the magnitude of the job confronting Contractor Simon B. Van Wagenen in cutting through the hill the road that will connect the bridge with the state road just below the brick school on the top of the Port Ewen hill.

Plenty Of Mud.

The rock cut was filled with water from the recent heavy storms and on either side of the cut the mud was deep. It was a clayey mud that made walking slippery, but thousands braved the mud to clamber up the hill and to look down upon the open space where the fireworks were set off.

Those who had not the foresight to wear rubbers were kept busy when they got home in cleaning the mud from their shoes, but what was a little mud to a good view of the really excellent display of fireworks set off by the Pain Company of New York?

It was one of the finest displays of fireworks seen in Ulster county in years, and all felt repaid who remained to see it.

While thousands had crossed the bridge to see the display there were other thousands who lined the high points on this side of the creek and watched the brilliant illumination in the sky.

It was a fitting close to one of the biggest days in the history of Kingston and Ulster county.

Wang Designed Brush Back.

Many who received the souvenir brush at the bridge banquet at the armory were struck with the fine design of the bridge on the back of the brush. The design was the work of C. Y. Wang, a Chinese student who is with the state highway department, who furnished the art drawing of the bridge for the brass die used to stamp in gold the bridge picture on the backs of the brushes. Mr. Wang deserves great credit for his fine work of art.

HOLY GRAIL MEETING.

Tongue Tells of City's Water Supply System.

The regular monthly meeting of the Knights of Holy Grail of Trinity M. E. Church was held on Tuesday evening and was well attended. A. W. Tongue, of the water works department of the city, gave a very interesting talk on the city's water supply system, outlining the consumption of water per day, the available supply, the method of filtration and disposal. He also gave statistics showing that Kingston was fortunate in having a gravity system which enabled the consumers to secure a reasonable rate for water supply. He further stated that, nearly all other cities had increased their rates on an average of 50 per cent when Kingston has maintained its regular rate, this increase being due to mechanical systems. As a whole Mr. Tongue's talk was very instructive and enjoyed by all. The Grail is making a study of civics and this was the first of a series of talks to be given during the winter months. The next regular meeting will be held on December 13.

Whether anyone has been swindled is not known. The Freeman is publishing a newspaper, not selling crockery. It offers no premiums. The paper is worth the price, without dishes, spike tooth harrows, oil paintings, altships or artesian wells thrown in as premiums and anyone foolish enough to think otherwise deserves all he gets.

THIS WAS THE "BAND" YOU THOUGHT YOU HEARD.

A carload shipment of grafonolas received Tuesday by the Columbia Shop of No. 273 Fair street was put to good use by William S. McDonough in entertaining the huge crowds which were on the streets in connection with the celebration of the opening of the Rondout Creek Bridge.

Three motor trucks were loaded with grafonolas and took different routes through town. With the aid of a new attachment somewhat similar to the loud speaking telephone attachment which enabled thousands of people to hear President Harding's speech on Armistice Day, which is controlled by storage batteries, the sound of the grafonola selections could be heard for a block as the motor cars traveled through the different streets.

Representatives of the Columbia Talking Machine Company who were in town aided in arranging the demonstration and providing music for practically the entire city.

A "Shake" on the Bridge.

RAIL LABOR RULE DECISION DEC. 1

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, Nov. 30.—Any further readjustments of the wages of the employes of the railroads of the country, either upward or downward, must be made to fit into new working rules which the United States Railway labor board will announce tomorrow, Vice-Chairman Ben W. Hooper of the board, declared here today in a speech bristling with significant allusions to pending railroad issues.

He spoke at a luncheon before the Chicago Association of Commerce. He said that the decision which the board will make effective tomorrow will leave the board free to consider requests for wage readjustments long before either the railroads or the unions bring formal requests before the board.

This statement was taken to mean that the board will take the initiative on the wage issue.

"It is now apprehended in some quarters," Hoover said "that the railroad labor organizations may either dictate to the government, or in an effort to do so, strangle commerce and plunge the country into industrial strife and misery.

"The time will never come again when the American public will be willing to give the carriers and their employes unrestrained freedom to engage in industrial warfare to the destruction of the peace, comfort and property of the innocent third party, the public."

Hoover said, in justice to labor, that is has been less guilty of violating the decisions of the labor board than the carriers. But, he added, labor organizations, "like many other things, inherently good, are susceptible of abuse through passionate and greedy leadership."

The issues of the future, he added, must be handled "on a sensible, just and firm public policy."

NAVAL EXPERTS STILL DEADLOCKED

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Nov. 30.—The naval experts of the United States, Great Britain and Japan met in secret for nearly two hours today and failed to break the deadlock which has resulted from Japan's refusal to accept the ratio of 10-10-6 laid down in the original Hughes proposal.

When the session broke up, it was learned that the experts would report to their respective delegations that no headway had been made, leaving the principal delegates themselves to thresh out the matter.

A particularly interesting meeting of the Lowell Club was held at the home of Mrs. James H. Everett on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Everett interestingly reviewed part two of the story, "A Japanese Nightingale," and Mrs. Adams had the paper for the day on "Shrines and Temples of Japan." This very informing and admirable paper was made even more interesting by the reading of a letter which Mrs. Adams had received from a Japanese student at Portland, Oregon, where Mrs. Adams's daughter is a teacher. The letter told the story of Shintoism. Next week the club will meet with Mrs. Van Buren.

ON-A-JOB, OFF-A-JOB JIM

Being a Story

Of how Jim got on a job and why he got off it again.

Jim deserted the stage the next day, and worked in the front of the house changing bulbs and cleaning the fixtures He had often wondered how the burnt out bulbs in the dome of the theaters were changed. He soon learned and was called upon to do the changing himself.

There were two methods in the theater where Miss Chase was playing. Close to the ceiling were several set clusters, with bulbs close to the plaster. These were reached through trop doors on the ceiling and Jim found, in reaching out through the opening that he could remove all the bulbs in the group He dusted the cluster and took out the several bulbs that were burnt out and one or two more that were blackened, just on the verge of burning out.

The center chandelier was lowered from above until Jim was able to reach it, standing on a high step ladder He worked rapidly, although he suffered occasionally from a sinking feelin within, as he looked down from his great height and wondered what would be left of him if he fell

On the second day he worked at the bulbs in the sign on the front of the theater He placed his ladder against the building and started working on the letters of "Minnie Chase Stock Company." Soon after he had started, he heard two women conversing below

"Don't go under the ladder, Jennie"

"Uh! I ain't afraid of no ladder. I'll walk where I please."

"Bad luck will come to you, sure as fate"

"Let it then Say, do you think I'll walk way out in the street just because I'd be afraid of a ladder?"

Jim heard no more, but he began to think of superstitions. "The only ad luck woulld be if I dropped something on her head, or if she knocked the ladder from under me." He continued to work, and all at once realized that a familiar voice was talking below.

"Guess he's going to block up the sidewalk all day. No, I will not go all the way around the ladder. I'll go under and take my chance."

"But Jennie—"

"Don't Jennie me. If these men want to hang around all day blocking the public highway, I refuse to step out into the gutter for them"

Jim grinned at the illogical arguments of the women. If anything fell, let the man above suffer Then he grew sober If she hit the ladder, the man above would suffer in all seriousness The voices trailed off in the distance. They were gone hardly fifteen minutes when Jim heard them returning He had gone the length of the sign, had replaced all the burnt bulbs, and was ready to descend, when he recognized the sidewalk-monopolizer's voice.

"Say, if that guy ain't there still! Wouldn't that git your goat? He must be roosting up there. I wouldn't pay him no dollar on hour for his labors." Then, to some whispered caution, "No, I will not go around the ladder. As I said before, I'll take a chance on going under it. Let him do his worst."

Jim was ready. Surreptitiously he watched her and when she was directly below the ladder he let fall one of the burnt out bulbs. It struck the ground just behind her and went off with a bang like a torpedo.

Jennie gave one shriek and fled down the street without once looking back Behind her followed her more timid companion. The last Jim saw of them, Jennie was still ahead.

Superintendent of Philadelphia Postoffice Tells of Some Amusing Experiences He Had Had.

Every one who has watched the crowd collect in front of the parcel post window at holiday time knows that the mail has a more or less humorous side, remarks the Philadelphia Record. How humorous it can be you do not realize till you begin to find out about it.

Mr. Johnson, the superintendent of mails at the central postoffice, knows. He has 27 years' experience.

"Did the crying baby ever go through the mails?" the reporter questioned him.

Mr. Johnson shook his head. "No, the only live things allowed are live chicks and bulbs. Everything else under the sun does go. Sometimes very humorous and pathetic incidents occur.

"An old Virginia mammy wanted to ship herself home parcel post. Every Christmas she had received a nice fat package through the mail. It meant direct communication with her own people. She pictured Christmas down on the plantation in all the rosy glow of her far-off childhood. She craved to go back and she didn't know how to go. She had just enough brains to know that she was too ignorant to take the long journey by herself. So she came to her mistress.

'Couldn't I just be labeled an' stamped an' weighed,' she demanded, 'and sent along back to Virginny with the postman? I'd like to give myself as a Christmas present to my folks this year.'

"Humorous but pathetic as well, isn't it?"

Mr. Johnson talks like a Virginian and has a true gift of telling a story.

"A negro said there were three kinds of pies, the covered, the uncivered and the barred. We have to do with the barred variety. In a country district some one made the most beautiful barred apple pie. They decided to send it through the mails to a friend in Philadelphia. Great was their trust. They put a string through one of the bars. Tied on a label with the name and address and the proper amount of postage. Put the pie in a pieplate and sent it off on its journey.

"That pie arrived in perfect condition. It had appealed to the humorous sense of the clerks and had been handed from one man to the next with the greatest care."

Mr. Johnson also had amusing experiences when he worked in the railway mails. Bags collected at the rural stations often contain queer guests.

"I have seen a clerk open a bag and a small snake come out," continued Mr. Johnson merrily, "whenever that happens they look as if they had been struck by green lightning.

"The bag had been put down somewhere and somehow the snake had managed to creep in.

"At places too small for the express to stop, the mail bag is hung out on an iron crane. The postal clerk grabs it and throws out another as the train goes by. I had just taken off a pouch and opened it when out stepped a chicken. Not a day-old chicken, but a good sized bird. You could have knocked me over with a feather when I saw that fowl."

POLISH EFFECTS IN PARIS GOWNS

Styles Have Great Dignity and Elegance; Call for Use of Rich Materials.

USE BROADCLOTH AS NOVELTY

Perforated Fabric Is Being Featured by the Important Dressmakers in France—Tea Gowns Are In Attractive Models.

Suffering Poland has furnished the Paris dressmaker with her inspiration for the fashions of this fall and the coming winter, according to a Paris fashion correspondent. From this war-racked poverty stricken country has come the lead for the luxury of the world. It is not the Poland of today that is dominating, but the Poland of ancient glory which kept step with France in her progress toward civilization.

Many missions have gone from France into Poland, and each group has returned impressed by her pathos and her beauty. These missions have had a bearing on present-day fashions, all of which are of the Renaissance period touched with the Polish influence.

The Polish Renaissance influence is a transforming one because practically every part of the dress has been touched. Sleeves have been made larger and in fancy style both open and with under sleeves. Collars have heightened and have grown very important looking. The waistline has dropped several inches. The skirt has lengthened and taken on a flare so this movement is almost revolutionary.

These styles have great dignity and elegance. They call for the use of rich materials of heavy weight. Trimmings are heavy in the form of big cabuchons, nail heads and heavy embroideries that stand out from the background. The goldsmith's trade was at its zenith during this period and the costumes of the nobility were adorned with real and semi-precious jewels and ornamented with hammered gold and silver. Today all of these effects are being imitated with great success.

Quilted Velvet Model.

Such fringes as are used are heavy, being made of facet chenille and strings of large beads instead of the fine silk strands of modern times.

There is a new line of quilted materials brought out by Rodier which works up wonderfully in these Polish-Renaissance models.

One of the most striking examples of the Polish styles is the model named Nihuski, made by Jean Patou.

The Tan Broadcloth Suit Which Features Perforated Trimming; Brown Monkey Fur Is Used.

It is of Rodier's Glocki, a quilted velvet, the quilting being done in gold thread. It is trimmed with black Persian lamb fur and has hammered steel nail head embroidery on the un dersleeve and a heavily jeweled girdle worn at a low waistline. The model holds the keynote of much that is new and interesting in forthcoming fashion for autumn and winter.

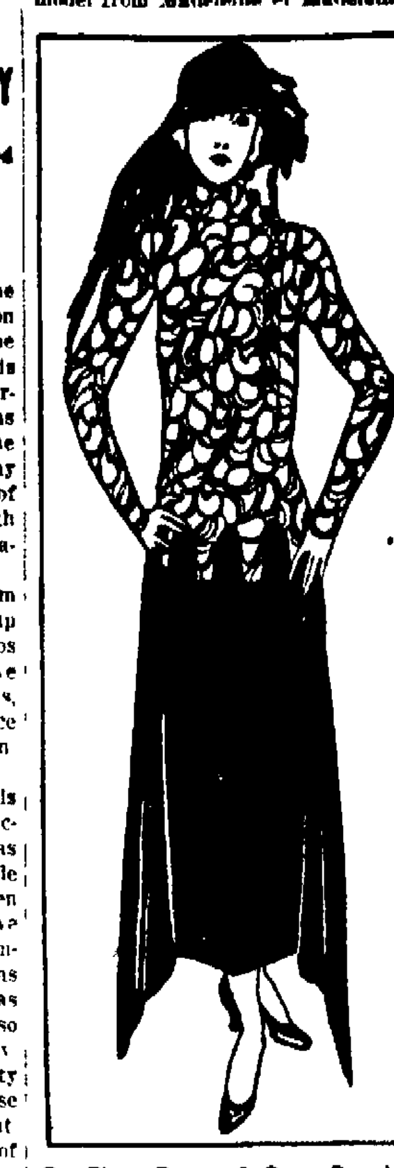

In common with many other of this season's tailored dresses, it shows a high muffling collar. Persian lamb was chosen for it, and the same fur trims the sleeves and forms bands down either side. This old-fashioned fur also is having a renaissance and will be one of the most fashionable furs this winter. Black Persian lamb is extensively used as a trimming.

Copies of this dress have been made with the high muffling collar of cloth embroidered in band effect or entirely covered with embroidery. It also has been worked out in cloth fringed with monkey fur.

Aside from emphasizing the Polish theme in tailored suits, Patou shows three-quarters and seven-eighths length tailored suit coats with wide flaring circular cut fullness. Many of these show the low blousing waistline or low belted waistlines of the middle ages and the Renaissance period. From an inspirational standpoint in design the Polish peasant dress and the Italian Renaissance court costumes of about the Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries have furnished most of Patou's ideas.

The Renaissance is strongly predominant in the sleeve effects of both dresses and mantles. He makes the wide flowing and bell shaped sleeve, often accompanied by an under sleeve of brilliant contrasting color.

New and interesting garments show a combination of cloth and fur. One model from Madeleine et Madeleine is developed in perllaine, Rodier's new material, in a deep pumpkin shade trimmed with Hudson seal.

A tailored suit is also from Madeleine et Madeleine. For it they have selected perforated broadcloth and have worked it out in the new beltless coat effect.

Practically every important dressmaker in Paris is using perforated broadcloth as a novelty. It is often underlaid with a contrasting color, as in this instance where brown crepe de chine is used, the crepe de chine exactly matching the color of the fur, which is brown monkey skin.

The One-Piece Dress.

A simple style of one-piece dress designed to be worn under a fur coat is developed in a gray broadcloth, the skirt being of the cloth and the bodice of a mixed metallic material showing a reflection of red and steel. Handsome steel buttons fasten the collar and one side of the bodice. A three-quarter length gray squirrel coat was made to accompany this frock. It is one of Madeleine et Madeleine's models.

The same house also shows among their new things a popular cloth street dress made of velours de laine in a beautiful shade of beige trimmed with applique rounds of brown satin and having a high fur collar and fur cuffs.

A beautiful tea gown or negligee, whether it be for formal or informal wear, is dear to the heart of every woman. This type of garment follows the lead of dresses. It is indeed difficult to distinguish those of more formal character from an afternoon or evening gown.

Callot adheres to long and slender lines in negligees. One of her loveliest models—a draped affair of velvet brocaded chiffon in a burnt orange hue—features a back hood drapery, in addition to drapery at the hips. She trims the shoulders as well as the bottom of the skirt with narrow bands of squirrel dyed brown to blend with the orange-colored chiffon.

The same designer has created many models from uncut strips of material by cleverly draping them to the figure from the shoulder to the opposite hip, allowing the ends to form an uneven train.

The materials employed for the new tea gowns are elaborate. Much is being made of brocades, particularly metallic and velvet brocaded chiffons. Soft velvets either plain, crushed or printed, as well as heavy silks, are in evidence. These materials lend themselves well to the more graceful and dignified draped models.

Stenciled Linen Curtains Wash.

Linen or canvas curtains that are decorated with stenciled borders will wash if the washing is carefully and quickly done. They should be put into lukewarm soapy water that has a half cupful of salt in it, and be washed not on a board, but by hand. Then should be squeezed to get rid of all the water possible. Then allow to drip dry in the sun. Iron the curtains when quite damp and place a cloth over the stenciling. Don't use too hot an iron for fear of changing the color.

Take Motors to Dinner.

A new type of open-air restaurant which has parking room inside the restaurant property for the cars of the patrons is becoming popular in California. Pergolas, built convenient to the roadway and thatched to keep off the hot California sunshine, serve as the dining room, and caterers bring the food ordered to the sheltered car. Another type of dining room where the car is invited is characterized by a long thatched patio. It is open on one side, and the owner can drive his car to a point convenient to his table and watch it during his meal.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Suffers for Heroism

Sergt. Willie Sandlin of Devil's Jump Branch, Leslie county, is suffering a serious lung affection as the result of gas inhaled while in the Argonne forest, he was told when he visited Richmond, Ky., for examination by government physicians.

Sergeant Sandlin, advancing in command of a platoon at Bois de Forger, France, September 26, 1918, kept on when discovery of a machine-gun nest brought a command to halt. In one day he destroyed three machine gun nests, killed 24 Germans, captured six machine guns and a hospital group, killing the German lieutenant with his own gun.

Sergeant Sandlin was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, the Croix de Guerre with palm, the Medal Militaire and citations from General Pershing and Marshal Foch.

Natural Colored Silk.

Experiments made in France, it is reported, show that the yellow and green colors possessed by the silk spun by certain caterpillars are due to coloring matter derived from the food and passed through the blood of the spinners.

By impregnating leaves with artificial colors the experimenters caused some species of caterpillars to produce silk of bright orange-yellow and fine rose hues.

By the aid of the spectroscope the presence and nature of colored pigments in the [illegible] of the little creatures were established.—Washington Star.

Birthday Cake Candles.

The custom of placing candles on a birthday cake—one for each year—comes from Germany. The Germans placed a thick one in the center, called Lebenslicht, the light of life.

Only he or she who declares his or her birthday may put out the light of life, it is unlucky if done by any other member of the family.

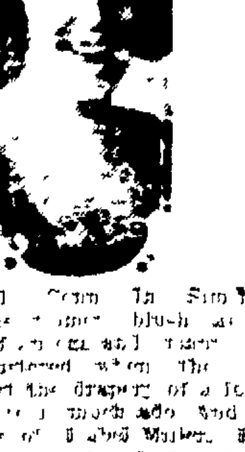

The lights are symbols of life and its portions the years. For persons advanced in years one candle must do duty, as otherwise too many would be required.

"Rock of Ages, Cleft for Me."

"Rock of Ages" hymn by Augustus Montague Toplady was first printed in 1775 and has since become one of the most popular of all Christian hymns. It has been translated into over three hundred languages. Toplady was inspired to write the hymn when he found refuge from a thunder storm in a cleft rock. The rock was located in Blagdon parish, England.

KINGSTON, N. Y., NOV. 30, 1921.

The way to get something done that looks like a hard job is go at it and stick to it until it is done. Then it will be out of the way.

It is stated that almost all the delegates to the Washington conference—except the French—speak English. And no doubt almost all of them—except the English and Americans—speak French.

According to a British writer, people grow old faster in winter than in summer. If eating more and exercising less tends to develop old age germs, then it is doubtless true that in the cooler climes summer is more favorable to the preservation of youth.

Bernard Shaw's inquiry as to "whose baby is Ruth" is partly answered in the published intimation that Judge Landis can exercise any sort of authority only at great risk. A new baseball league is threatened if the judge ventures to fine the Babe so much as "one nickel."

Christmas is coming and so is New Year's. Now is the time to charge your memory with what you would like to do during the holidays. By thinking things over you may be able to do just what gives you the most pleasure. The most pleasure, however, is giving, or doing something for somebody else.

Both Schwab and Gary not only support the naval holiday proposition on humanitarian grounds but, contrary to expectation, calmly express the opinion that the limitation of armaments will not result in the manufacture of less steel. The change, as they see it, will merely make the productive sources of the nation more fully available for the uses of peace.

The people in various counties of the State are convinced that Governor Miller meant what he said when he declared that he would cut the cost of state government. The fact that the counties have received notice that their share of state expense will be less than it was last year is what tells the story in terms that are understandable. This is only the beginning, for the Governor says there will be further reduction, and what he says he means.

The idea that economy is something to be talked about but not practiced does not carry much weight at this time when it is the one subject being discussed at every fireside and in every spot where thinking people assemble. There is no doubt that there were those who thought they would always have a big "wad," but now that the "wad" has shrunk they are studying income and outgo a bit more seriously. This was bound to come but it may have its lesson for there always will be good times and then times that are not so good.

The state labor department has prosecuted several employers for not obeying the labor laws, and there is indication that there will be further efforts along this line. Violations will not be tolerated and those who assumed that they could interpret the laws to suit themselves, rather than obey the statutes, are now ready to admit that their interpretation was not the best. It will be recalled that Governor Miller, when the labor department was reorganized, called attention to the fact that the labor laws would be enforced and that no one, employer or employe, would be exempt. The jail sentences prove that his orders were carried out.

"ADVANCE" IN EATING.

Writing in the Independent, Henry Holt, the veteran publisher and author, notes that "an immense advance in our social customs has been the diminution of gluttony," adding: "That's not a nice word, but it's the right one. Dinners in the 60's and 70's were a matter of sixteen courses and at least seven glasses. Today I go to dinner where there is but one glass, and that for water. Yet there was little or no drunkenness among the men with whom I associated." Putting aside the bitterly disputed question of "glasses" and speaking only of food, there is room for an expression of doubt as to whether there has been so great an advance. An octogenarian is compelled to be both particular and sparing in his eating, and if Mr. Holt even now watched a man some sixty years his junior at the dinner table he would probably mistake for "gluttony" the mere hearty appetite of normal youth.

The "immense advance" has been particularly questionable since the war, poor food at unheard of prices having been the average rule. Man now goes to the dinner table to find nothing good to eat, and often not even enough of the bad, unless he pays excessive costs to the restaurant keeper or—in his own home—to the cook, the grocer, the butcher and the baker. If Mr. Holt were not more fortunately placed than many and inevitably moderate in his requirements, he would hardly see in all this a welcome advance. But it is a pleasure to find an octogenarian so optimistic and disinclined to croak about "the good old times," even if in this one particular they must have been better than the present.

What do you want to know about Nature Subjects? Send any questions of general interest to the Nature Notes Dept of this paper. Look for answers in this column.

Can You Answer These Questions?

1. How many eggs does an alligator lay? When?

2. If you threw seeds of fringed gentian in a swampy place, would they grow?

3. Is it known how many wing strokes a bird can make in a minute?

Answers in Tomorrow's Nature Notes.

Answers To Previous Questions.

1. Will minks attack poultry?

Yes, if they get a chance, as they belong to the weasel tribe, notoriously blood thirsty. Mink "wild" food is fish (the mink is partly aquatic), mice, rabbits, or any obtainable small mammals and birds.

2. What relationship is the rattle snake pilot to the rattlesnake?

It is one of the moccasins, Ancistrodon contortrix, called highland moccasin copperhead, pilot snake, chunkhead, and rattlesnake pilot. What "pilot" function it has comes from the rapid vibration of its tail in excitement, making—if the snake is among dry leaves—a buzzing noise, that warns intruders, or possibly other snakes that may be in the vicinity. It has no real rattle on its tail.

3. Are all birds' eggs edible?

Probably so, even ostrich eggs being said to be palatable when fresh. But hen's eggs from time immemorial have been the most practical source if that kind of food, owing to the natural tendency to lay abundantly. Of course this tendency is constantly artificially stimulated, both by taking away the eggs, so that a setting is never accumulated unless the owner is willing; and by feeding egg-producing foods.

SPEECHES AT ARMORY DINNER

Greene Tells of His Hard Job to Get Work Really Started—Walton Reminiscent—Sisson Likes Kingston Route.

Nearly seven hundred men and women attended the luncheon given at the New York State Armory on Tuesday and listened with enjoyment to the speeches which were made by present and former officials and by distinguished guests from civil life.

The feature of the luncheon which attracted more attention than anything else was the appearance of veterans of the Civil War and members of the "EightyYears Young Club," led by Major James H. Everett and Levi Bacharach, as they marched to a large table especially reserved for them, adjoining the guest table. The entire audience stood while they took their places and remained standing until after prayer had been offered by the Rev. A. H. Haynes, who had marched into the hall supported by ex-Senator Jacob Rice.

Throughout the luncheon the Kiwanis and Rotary Club members with Harry P. Dodge as song leader, rendered a fine program, with Maisenhelder's orchestra accompanying them.

The luncheon was served under the direction of Carlton S. Preston and in every way, including service by women of various church and fraternal organizations, satisfied everybody.

Judge Fowler's Introductory.

County Judge Joseph M. Fowler, president of the Chamber of Commerce, acted as toastmaster.

Mr. Cook's Participation.

Former Assemblyman Andrew J. Cook, who introduced the bill which made the Rondout Creek bridge part of the state highway system, was the first speaker. He reviewed the part he had performed in securing the bridge and gave Philip Elting credit for having conceived the idea embodied in the bill.

Colonel Greene's Tribulations.

Major Frederick Stuart Green, former state highway commissioner, was next introduced by Judge Fowler, who said that no one state administration was entitled to the bridge work in which several state administrations had been interested and had tried to push to successful conclusion. Former Governor Alfred E. Smith was unable to be present but Major Greene, who had formed the plan for the present structure, had served as highway commissioner under him and was the man under whom the present bridge had made great strides toward completion.

When Major Greene arose to reply, the entire audience sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and he was received with prolonged applause.

Colonel Greene said in part:

"On the day when you are celebrating the opening of the bridge which means so much not only to the city of Kingston but to the entire state of New York, it might be well to look back on some of the difficulties that were encountered. During the twenty months I had the pleasure and honor of being your highway commissioner, no project out of the three or four hundred matters we had in the department gave us more trouble than the Rondout Creek Bridge, but like the fond parent who favors an unruly child, we took all the more pleasure and interest in seeing it grow out of its difficulties.

"One thing certain is that it was the only project to which I took to myself the entire personal supervision, the only project whose plans and specifications I took to my own office where I could always have them at hand.

"Many of you will remember that the present bridge is not the first bridge that was designed. I knew of the Rondout creek bridge when I took the office of commissioner, and it was the first project I looked at the Rondout Creek Bridge when I looked at it I became alarmed because in my judgment it did not have a safe foundation. I accordingly sent the plans to a bridge engineer who had had more experience in bridge building than any other engineer in this country, and he confirmed our fears.

"Now I was then and am now the worst kind of amateur in politics; I don't understand them. So you can imagine my intense surprise at the row that followed the announcement that the plans for the other bridge did not provide a safe foundation. I had never been in Tammany Hall in my life, so you can imagine how I felt when I read in all the newspapers that I was a Tammany commissioner who had the city of Kingston and the county of Ulster in his clutches and was at their throat. We designed a new bridge, but the commotion kept up. Finally I brought the plans to Kingston and explained the situation.

"The people of Kingston listened to what I had to say, and while they did not dispute my word there was an undercurrent in what they said that made me think they did not believe in my sincerity. The upshot was that I got rather angry and rather unceremonious when I talked, but what I said was that I would build that bridge or bust a June. (Applause.)

"One Republican friend—for I have friends among Republicans—came to me afterward and said: 'Now, we here, Greene as a good Republican I haven't the slightest objection to most Democrats hustling their lunes of they want do, but I don't want to see you bust your lune.' Then he told me that I would be the same as other men who had promised to build the bridge, but that I was innocent and unsophisticated in politics, that I didn't know the strong influences against the project or how strong they were or how they would be felt, or when, and that I never would build the bridge. As he went away I said to myself, 'Well, there is a crape-hanger,' but as time went on I found that instead of being a crape-hanger he was really a prophet. Well, you see for yourself that he was a prophet; I didn't build the bridge; Commissioner Sisson did, but I am glad to say I was able to give it a start. (Applause.)

"The bridge as designed when I became commissioner was for a concrete structure, but in the end we had to change our plans and revert to a suspension bridge, which you now have. And I want to tell you it is a good bridge. Don't take my word for it. The plans of this bridge have been carefully examined by Ralph Modjeska and Mr. Moran, the engineers of the Camden bridge, the largest suspension bridge in the world with a 1,750 foot span—but remember, just at this point, that your bridge is no boy's job, with its 705 foot span—Mr. Modjeska has looked at the plans which were prepared by Mr. Moran and by Mr. Yates, and has pronounced it a good bridge, a safe bridge and the proper kind of bridge for this location.

"Probably the hardest thing an engineer has to do is to give up a plan he has carefully prepared, and when Mr. Moran had to scrap his plan for a concrete bridge, it hurt him more than the replanning cost him.

"There is a nice point that was brought out about the suspension bridge. You may remember that the papers said the bridge never would be built. One paper of Kingston ran a column of comment of what the barber said when he was shaving customers. After the suspension bridge plans had been prepared, I read in that column that a customer of the barber shop asked the barber: 'Well what do you think of the suspension bridge?' and he answered, 'Why, it's been suspended for the past fifty years and it might as well be suspended for fifty years more.'

"But we kept on working, and finally the day came to let the contract for the suspension bridge, and to our surprise and sorrow we found we didn't have a bid. I can yet see the look on Senator Walton's face. We talked it over, and decided we had to have a $400,000 appropriation. Senator Walton worked hard for it, and finally the bill was passed appropriating $400,000, and then the bill was taken in a hurry to Governor Smith to see what he would do, and I never in my life saw him sign any bill quicker than he signed that bill.

"Then we revised our estimates of the cost and we re-advertised for bids and it looked as if all our troubles were over, but we found out very soon that they were not. Nine months before I had said to some of you people in Ulster county, 'You must get us the necessary rights of way.' And for nine months I had written and telephoned and telegraphed about those rights of way, but after advertising twice and finally getting a bid from a responsible firm of experienced bridge builders, we found that you didn't have your necessary rights of way.

"Then your Automobile Club combined with your Chamber of Comemrce and they came to the rescue with some kind of indignation meeting, and two days later we received the rights of way that for nine months we had been begging for but hadn't been able to get. That is what public opinion can do when it gets aroused. From that day the bridge project has marched on steadily until now you are about to realize your hopes.

"You have your bridge, but Kingston is not through yet. In the city of Washington we have an institution of which every American citizen is proud, an institution which is visited each year by thousands of people. It is known as the Smithsonian Institution, and it is a place where relics are kept for purposes of study and enlightenment. The first American automobile is preserved there. The first American airplane is there, and there are relics of more ancient date, and all the time they are collecting and receiving more ancient and more interesting relics than those I have mentioned.

"In Kingston you have a relic which you don't have to keep any longer, a relic that has attracted not only your attention but the attention and comment of thousands of visitors, and your work will not be complete until you have procured and sent to the Smithsonian Institution at Washington for perpetual preservation and study by wondering visitors from all parts of the world your famous chain ferry at Rondout." (Prolonged laughter and applause.)

Senator Walton Also Reminiscent.

Senator Charles W. Walton was next introduced and Judge Fowler referred to the active part he had taken in the solution of the great financial problem mentioned by Colonel Greene.

Senator Walton said in part:

"This is no ordinary occasion to commemorate for to many of us it marks the culmination of years and years of effort. There never was a time in our history that man was not ready in all crafts and in all construction for the people. New York state has always been in the forefront of the movement for the construction of good roads, and in all the state of New York Ulster county not only has been in the forefront but it has built good roads ahead of all other counties of the state.

"When other counties were building good roads out of the proceeds of the state road bonds, Ulster county had built and paid for so many good roads that when the road money was appropriated among the different counties we found that Ulster had a surplus of $200,000. It was then that Mr. Elting suggested the idea of the construction of the Rondout Creek Bridge as part of the great highway system of the state, and Ulster county decided to give willingly her $200,000 for this purpose and the state of New York gave the rest.

"You all know the vicissitudes attending the construction of the bridge. There were many things to be considered. There were war times, the days that tried men's souls. Prices of material and labor had altered conditions somewhat were not the same as they had been, and you can imagine how your representative felt when Colonel Greene, then the state highway commissioner, said that he needed $400,000 more to build the bridge. But we went to work at it, and it wasn't long before we turned it over, and the bridge whose opening we are celebrating today was the result.

"What a moment about the ... of war to which reference has been

A very common cause of constipation

Poor appetite is now known to be an important factor in this condition

A RECOGNIZED authority on the subject of constipation maintains that "a poor appetite is a very common cause of constipation, especially in women." A certain quantity of food is necessary for the intestines to function normally.

The same authority also says: "Insufficient food leads directly to emaciation and physical weakness as well as to constipation; it causes the already depressed nervous system to deteriorate still further, and this reacts again on the digestion, so that the dyspepsia and constipation become more severe."

Under such conditions Fleischmann's Yeast has remarkable value as a laxative food and conditioner. It furnishes a large amount of the water-soluble vitamine which helps all the processes of digestion, and, in addition, because of its freshness (you get it fresh daily) it helps the intestines in their elimination of poisonous waste matter. Thousands are adding Fleischmann's Yeast to their daily diet, and by eating regularly from 2 to 3 cakes a day are restoring and maintaining normal action of the bowels.

Fleischmann's Yeast is a pure, fresh food assimilated like any other familiar food. Eat it daily—have it on the table at home. Have it at your office and eat it at your desk. Get it at your lunch place. You will like its fresh, distinctive flavor, and the clean, wholesome taste it leaves in your mouth. Only one precaution: if troubled with gas dissolve the yeast first in very hot water. This does not affect the efficacy of the yeast. Place a standing order with your grocer for Fleischmann's Yeast.

Send 4 cents in stamps for the booklet, "The New Importance of Yeast in Diet." So many inquiries are coming in daily for this booklet that it is necessary to make this nominal charge to cover cost of handling and mailing. Address THE FLEISCHMANN COMPANY, 701 Washington Street, New York City.

The need for scientifically tested yeast

Fresh yeast has been proved by recent scientific tests to be a valuable food for correcting run-down conditions, constipation, indigestion and certain skin disorders. These original tests were all made with Fleischmann's Yeast. Beware of untested yeast-vitamine preparations that contain drugs or other mixtures. Fleischmann's Yeast (fresh) is a pure food, rich in vitamine, in which it measures up to the high standards set by laboratories and hospitals. The familiar tin-foil package with the yellow label is the only form in which Fleischmann's Yeast for Health is sold.

REGINALD RED BAT.

"Reginald Red Bat," said Daddy, "was a member of the kind of bat family you know best.

"Now, Reginald was a very smart fellow, and he knew that other bats were, too, but he didn't know whether many other creatures besides bats thought this and knew this.

So he decided he would give a talk on the subject of bats. This was his talk:

"'Friends,' he began, 'we are all gathered together to hear a little talk on bats, and we all hope that this talk may be heard by more creatures than bats.

"'We hope there will be printed copies of our talk sent so that folks will know about bats.

"In the first place of all, we are smart, for we can hear so wonderfully well. Our eyesight is never of the best. Sometimes we cannot see at all, and yet people are annoyed with us because we fly about so near them.

"'But we will never hurt them, for though we may not be able to see well we hear wonderfully well. Yes, I have said that before, but it is worthy of being repeated.

"'People think we like bright lights, but why we go near bright lights is because there are insects around bright lights as a rule, and we go for them

"'Think of being able to fly so well and to hear so well that we can capture our food without seeing it. We listen and then fly up or down, this way or that, and we get our food by our quickness and our smartness.

"'How fast we fly, too! We can eat as we are flying, and the mothers can look after the children on the trees while they go off for food, but more often they take them along, too.

"'We love to fly and we are at home flying! We can talk then and we can say what we think and feel then. I told Mrs. Red Bat how much I cared for her as we were both flying along, and she said: "I love you too, Mr. Red Bat."

"'I didn't give her an engagement ring, for bats don't care about rings; but I told her she was a beautiful big bat, and that was more to her than an engagement ring.

"'Of course the Mrs. Red Bats are bigger than the Mr. Red Bats.

"'Mrs. Red Bat has three beautiful Bat babies, and was very proud because little Mrs. Brown Bat only had two, but little Mrs. Brown Bat was quite pleased, for that was a Brown Bat custom.

"'We have a lovely soft fluffy fur, and we are well meaning and do good by the insects we eat.

"'There is an old belief that we will fly into some one's hair—ladies are afraid of us when they see us flying about.

"'But we won't do them any harm! Gracious, no! The way they go after us is very mean, because we will do them no harm.

"'Yes, we will do them good. We will eat up bad insects. And we won't get in their hair. We can hear people even if we can't see them, and we don't want them, for they aren't insects which we'd eat.

"'Oh, Bats, whenever you get the chance each and all of you, tell everyone that we mean no harm, only good.

"'We ask nothing of anyone. We do our work in our own way. We look after ourselves and do not ask for pity or help.

"'Is it fair, then, to treat us badly? I don't think it is.

"'We live out of doors and we love the mild evenings. As long as it is at all warm we will stay around and we will never bother anyone.

"'Send out a message, Bats, and let our message be as follows:

"'"People! Do not hurt Bats. For we will do you no harm. We promise not to get into the ladies' hair, for we would dislike that more than they would. We absolutely promise that, and, what is more, that story of us is only gossip. We don't ask you for help but only we ask that you will not hurt us. This is our message."'"

Point of View.

A teacher trying to impress upon her children the importance of kindness to animals, took them for a walk in order to bring the lesson home to them.

Hearing a scream from little Johnny, she asked: "What's the matter, Johnny?"

"I've been sitting on a wasp," was the tearful reply, "and I'm afraid I've hurt the poor thing."

THE RUBY CRANBERRY.

The cranberry is rich in phosphates, sodium and potassium salts as well as iron; it also contains salycilic acid which is supposed to control rheumatism.

The importance of a sharp acid fruit which aids in the digestion of fatty foods cannot be too strongly recommended and the cranberry seems to be just the one to serve.

Cranberry Juice makes most delightful sherbets, punches and frappes and adds just the note of color so pleasing to the eye.

Cranberry pie need not be mentioned, for we all enjoy the crisp delicate crust put on in latticed strips over the rosy filling. This is a characteristic American pie of which we may justly be proud.

Cranberry sauce blends with any meat but it is as indispensable to the Thanksgiving feast as the turkey itself.

Cranberry Ice.—To two cupfuls of cranberry puree (cooked fruit put through a sieve), add two cupfuls of sugar, three tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and three cupfuls of water. Pour into a freezer and freeze as usual. Serve in sherbet cups with the meat course.

Cranberry and Prune Pie.—Cut in halves one and one half cupfuls of berries; wash under the tap to remove as many seeds as possible, as this improves the flavor; add one cupful of soaked prunes cut in pieces, three-fourths of a cupful of sugar and one tablespoonful of flour. Dot with bits of butter after pouring into the crust and cover with latticed strips or with a crust. Bake as usual.

Cranberry Roly Poly.—Make a short biscuit dough, roll it out one-half inch thick, spread generously with a layer of chopped, uncooked cranberries, well sprinkled with sugar. Roll up and pinch the edge; lay in a buttered plate and steam forty minutes, then set in the oven to dry. Serve with cream and sugar or with a hard sauce.

made. I can safely say that the county officials of Ulster county always have been ready to do their duty and to produce the necessary rights of way when notice was given that they were needed

"This bridge means the bringing together of all parts of this great state. It is another Appian Way, the finest scenic route in the United States, and when people come from all parts of our great country to view our work, our county is so rich in history, can show them wonders they never saw or dreamed of. Our famous mountains whose beauty has been told in song and story and our magnificent Ashokan reservoir are wonders to behold, and to these we must not forget to add the charms of Southern Ulster which now comes to our door, a section which raises more fruit than any other county in the entire state.

"We are proud of our county, our city and our bridge and we cannot let the time pass without giving full credit to all the men who in all seasons and under all stress worked at all times and did their utmost to build a bridge which will be of benefit to mankind for all time." (Applause.)

Sisson Praises Kingston Route.

State Highway Commissioner Herbert S. Sisson, the next speaker, said in part:

"I have been well repaid for coming here today. I have heard Colonel Greene give his explanation of why the Rondout creek bridge was changed. As a layman, not as a practical engineer, I had often wondered why the change was made.

"The construction of this bridge has progressed steadily since it was begun a year or so ago, and it is now practically completed. Not alone Kingston and Ulster county, not alone the other counties along the west side of the Hudson river, but the entire state of New York and its thousands of visitors annually are to be congratulated on the completion of this bridge.

"There is no more beautiful highway route anywhere than that which traverses the west side of the Hudson river between Albany and New York, and doubtless it will be even more appreciated as it is used by thousands of people in the years to come. I congratulate you on getting the appropriation that was needed from the state of New York. I trust you appreciate what the state has done and that the rest of the state will appreciate what you have done. It is a matter for congratulation certainly that the bridge will be finished well within the appropriation which was made for it. I am glad to have been here and to have had this opportunity to speak with you, and I shall be interested, as I know everyone else will be, in the ceremonies at the bridge. (Applause.)

Hughes Sent Regrets.

Judge Fowler asked Mayor Canfield to announce regrets which had been received.

Mayor Canfield said that many letters and telegrams had been received from many notable people throughout the country and many organizations which had been unable to send a representative also had sent letters. Among the letters of regret received had been those from Former Governors Alfred E. Smith, Charles S. Whitman and John A. Dix.

We have two Ulster counties, said Mayor Canfield one on the west bank of the Hudson river and another in the city of New York where there are so many former Ulster county residents that an Ulster County Society had been formed, from whose secretary the following telegram had been received:

"Although prevented from being present at your great bridge celebration today, our hearts beat with pride as sons of old Ulster on the completion of this wonderful work. Congratulations to the men who by their untiring efforts and zeal made this highway possible. Every true son of Ulster county at home and abroad must feel as we do, thrilled with gratitude on the consummation of this monument to Ulster county's progressiveness.

"JOSEPH DRAKE, Secretary."

Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes, who had spent much of his boyhood both in Kingston and in the town of Esopus, had personally penned a letter of regret, his engagements at the Disarmament Conference preventing his attendance.

Folhemus Pronounces Them Married.

Kingston and Esopus had stood shoulder to shoulder behind the bridge project, said Judge Fowler, and he called on the Rev. Cornelius H. Folhemus of Port Ewen to speak on behalf of the town of Esopus.

The Rev. Mr. Folhemus said in part:

"I speak for the land of the big red apple—the apple and the land that were so well known that when residents of the Old World wanted a good apple to eat, for years they sent to Esopus for it.

"No country, no state, no community can prosper that is separated. It must be bound together. The bridge which those farseeing men planned and secured will know no north or south, no east or west but it will be patronized by the whole world. Even from the other side of the world men will learn of the celebration commemorating the completion of this bridge and in due time they will cross it in order to view the scenery of the most beautiful river of the world.

"We rejoice that these two sections of the county are to be united, we are glad that this great city of Kingston reaches out its hand to the maid of Esopus and so today with the completion of this bridge we officially pronounce them married."

Lyons's Great Adventure Here.

Secretary of State John J. Lyons said he had not expected to speak and the occasion was of such importance, thinking as it did the great highway system of the state, that it would be wrong for him to wander around and make an address on a subject on which he was totally unprepared.

"The thing which has struck me, as it has thousands of other people who have traveled along our wonderful river, is the little chain ferry at the foot of the hill, and how appropriate it is and how in accord with the movement now on foot at Washington to scrap the navies of the world that you should begin the movement by scrapping that little ferry.

"I have noticed that little chain ferry many times, for this is not by any means my first visit to Kingston. Every youth has had his Great Adventure. At the age of twelve years mine was in Kingston, but I shall not tell you about it today. But I want you to know that I know Kingston. I thank you for the opportunity to present myself and I sincerely congratulate you on the completion of your great project."

President McCoy Enthusiastic.

George E. McCoy of Peekskill, President of the Hudson Valley Federated Chamber of Commerce, the next speaker, said Kingston had a warm place in his heart and he congratulated the city with all his heart on the wonderful gathering.

"I wish that every citizen of the Hudson valley could have stood where I stand and watched those veterans of the Civil War march to their places at that table yonder. It would have stirred their hearts as no words of any orator can stir them, it would have thrilled them to tears.

"I congratulate you on the wonderful citizenship you have displayed in this movement. The result of your action is that you will make two blades of grass grow where only one grew, and will make the desert places bloom as the rose. You solve the problem of transportation, and thereby your action is of benefit not only to your own communities but to the state of New York and the world. I heartily congratulate you on the way in which you bring things to pass. In your case is strength. That is what has made America what she is today, and there is nothing quite equal to being an American citizen."

Dreamers And Obstructionists Unite.

Judge Clearwater, the last speaker, said that in his long life in this ancient city he had had two great surprises: one was to be called on without warning to speak, and the other was to have the positive assurance that he could cross the Rondout creek on a bridge.

"That is the greatest experience of my life," said Judge Clearwater. "All of you know that I have been here over two and a half centuries. Ever since I have lived here I have heard of the Rondout Creek Bridge, and now in my declining years I see it actually realized.

"It was a great Roman architect and bridge builder who said that he had not builded an Empire or founded a state but he had builded bridges which would be remembered when empires had crumbled into dust.

"A bridge crossing a stream has a most important bearing on the life of people. A stream of water, no matter where it is found no matter what its size forms a natural boundary. Within your own memory, how little connection has there been between the people living on the east side of the Hudson river with those living on the west side. The Rondout creek has served as a similar barrier between the people of our city and those to the south.

"But after many years we see our dreams realized whereby the barrier is removed and dreamers and obstructionists all unite in celebrating today what accrues to the county and state and to the people of the entire United States, the crowning work of all their dreams and aspirations—the Rondout Creek Bridge.

Governor Miller Arrives.

Governor Miller and his party arrived at this point and were escorted by a detail of State Troopers to the guest table. On account of the lateness of the hour and the schedule arranged in the committee calling for the starting of the parade, which formally was to within a few minutes Governor Miller reserved his remarks for the formal ceremonies at the bridge.

Surrounded by a group consisting of Commissioner Sisson, Former Commissioner Greene, Mayor Canfield and others, who grouped themselves around the replica of the Rondout Creek Bridge which was exhibited in the center of the Armory, the governor posed for flashlight pictures and the official then proceeded by automobile to the reviewing stand at the city hall, where they witnessed the parade a few minutes later, and then forming the left of the line until the bridge was reached.

Much Happiness in Furs

Of all the practical gifts we know, fur most thoroughly expresses beauty and comfort.

Besides—there is always the matchless luxury of furry warmth—that outdoes any amount of wool and always seems to dress one in special smartness.

Daddy will not have to go far a-hunting, this winter. The abundance of fur has made a remarkable difference in price—to us and to you.

We urge furs . . . from the wee, dainty chokers, to scarves, muffs and entire coats. For the extremely chic,—wide bandings, cuffs and collars, to be used on coats that are not of fur. The new prices are as interesting as the variety!

No Set Time for Best Work.

Thomas Carlyle had a room built in his house in Chelsea with double walls so that he could not hear any of the noise from outside, and in this room he wrote "The French Revolution." Gambier, on the other hand, could not think well unless he was in a newspaper office where there was lots of noise and racket going on. The human brain gets accustomed each day to a certain time for action and it works better and is more active at that time than any other time in the 24 hours.

ADDRESS OF GOV. MILLER

The ceremonies at the dedication of the Rondout Creek Bridge Tuesday afternoon were extremely simple but impressive. There were addresses at the bridge by Mayor Canfield and Governor Miller. an American flag suspended near the Kingston end of the bridge was drawn back, the governor and his party walked across to the Esopus side, guarded by state troopers and followed by a crowd which completely filled the roadway from one end of the bridge to the other, and the crowd dispersed.

Mayor Canfield's Address.

Mayor Canfield presided at the bridge ceremonies and in introducing Governor Miller said:

All thoughts and words added together are inadequate to properly and completely express our feelings today. It is more than an eventful day to our city and county and state. We mark today with a white mark. So while we celebrate and "ceremonize" we seriously and earnestly express our heartfelt gratitude to all who have participated in the moving and procuring efforts and in the planning, designing and building of the bridge.

The thought of the bridge has been in the minds of our people for five generations. It was a mere fanciful thought a century ago with no expectation of immediate realization. The people kept it in view. It seemed that the words of Longfellow applied to our bridge instead of a figurative bridge when he said, "Don't cross the bridge till you come to it," is a proverb old, of excellent wit."

It became necessary to bridge many difficulties to get the bridge. There were obstructions, drawbacks, retardments and objections until the realization seemed to be under a Scotch lock with the key missing. The waves have been buffeted, the current has been breasted. The bridge is a reality. The bridge is here.

While important locally, this bridge has a greater import. It is the last link in the greatest highway scenic route in this state. The Rondout creek which it crosses, is a beauteous stream rising in the majestic Catskills in Ulster county, leaping down the mountain-sides and through our valleys until it gathers sufficient strength to force its way northerly until it meets our mighty Hudson. This bridge fills the remaining lapse in the main highway route along the westerly side of the Hudson river. So, today, we all feel like applauding cheering and crying Hosannah.

Besides expressing our gratitude for the completion of this bridge, we express our welcoming thanks to all who have come from near and far to join us in the celebration.

We have added honor today in the personage of the chief executive of our state. We regard him highly. We respect and esteem him. We express our appreciation to him for his presence and our admiration for his business administration. We express to him our commendation for meritorious service.

It is a great thing to be governor of this great state. It is a greater thing to be a great governor of this great state. I present to you the Hon. Nathan L. Miller, the present great governor of our great state.

Governor Miller's Address.

Governor Miller was vigorously applauded when he arose to speak. He spoke as follows:

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen, Boys and Girls; This great outpouring is significant of the importance of this notable occasion and of the interest that it has to the people of this part of the state. The opening of his bridge is indeed a notable event and it is all the more impressive because it occurs at this historic spot in this historic city once the seat of government.

I am very glad indeed to contribute what I may by reason of being the chief executive of the state in adding by my presence here to the significance and the importance of this occasion. This bridge really marks a transition in the great problem of transportation by the right solution of which depends the prosperity and the welfare of our people.

This bridge, the only one of its kind as a part of the highway system constructed by the state, is the highest evidence of what the state is doing to the advancement of the proper solution of our great problem of transportation. The gasoline engine has, as I have said, paved the way for a transition in our transportation methods. Short transportation of the future is bound, in my opinion, to be conducted by means of the motor truck. That indicates what the state must do in order to provide a proper highway system. In my judgment, the development of motor truck transportation together with improved methods of marketing will solve the great problem of food production and distribution because production depends upon proper distribution upon which the welfare of producers and consumers of this state depend.

There is another significant thing which in evidence right here beneath us of what the state is doing in the way of improving transportation methods. My attention has just been called to a ship building plant beneath this bridge. It built barges for the old canal. I trust that it is going to build barges for our greatly improved, our splendid system of internal waterway transportation (applause) and I believe that the coordination of truck transportation with our great system of water transportation when properly developed, will go far toward the solution of the great problem to which I have referred. We have not learned how to use, yet, our water system of transportation. This river connecting with the great barge canal is now used perhaps to about one-twentieth of its capacity. The state has expended millions upon this waterway and we have now got to educate the people how to use it in order to get the benefit which is waiting to be had if only it can be used.

In the same way the state in improving our highway system is doing more than people realize. This very year upwards of twenty seven millions of dollars have been expended by the state in the maintenance of improved roads, in the construction of new roads, and in the reconstruction of old ones. We are committed to an expenditure for the next few years reaching up to and probably exceeding twenty millions of dollars a year in order to provide a proper highway system to take care adequately of the modern means of transportation and the policy of the state is to develop this system to the uttermost of its possibilities not only a connected trunk line system which has now been established, but as well the feeders to it by giving aid to the towns and counties in properly constructing the town and county highways. When that system shall have been completed, when our people can be educated to new methods of utilizing this great transportation system, land and water, I believe that many of our problems will be solved. And it is to the completion of that program that all of the energies of the state which it is possible to devote to that subject are now being concentrated upon the consummation of that great purpose.

Here this great bridge which the mayor said you had waited a century and more for, with the great work that is being done and is now coming to completion; below here around Storm King, will serve the needs not alone of these twin cities, not alone of the people of this section of the state, but it will serve the needs of all of the people of the state, in providing one of our main trunk line transportation systems through the center of the state.

I congratulate you upon the fact that you are about to enjoy the use of this means of crossing this stream. I am pleased to see the interest manifested by this great concourse of people. I hope that this great achievement will bear fruit in adding to the prosperity of this section of our state and to the prosperity of the state as a whole, and I am very proud indeed to be here to help you dedicate this great public work (Applause).

"You'll get run into," responded the rider as he knocked the other down.

Why Guess About It—
When You Can Know About It?

Suppose a guide said—

"This way there's a safe and pleasant road to your destination, with no risks or troubles on the way," and—

"That way there's a road that a good many have stalled on and turned back from, but you may get through."

Which would you take?

Postum is a thoroughly agreeable and satisfying meal-time drink, and you're sure that it's perfectly safe for health. Coffee contains drug qualities which disturb and harm the health of many.

Postum or coffee? Which road?

Why guess when you can know?

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes. Sold by all grocers.

The One-Ton Truck

The Ford One-Ton Truck first made its appeal to the farmer and the merchant because of the merits of Ford Cars. And it made its wonderful reputation and great sales record because it lived up to every claim made for it.

The reliable Ford Motor, the special Ford steel chassis, the aluminum bronze worm-drive, all combine to produce a truck of unusual power, capacity and strength—a truck that lasts in service; a truck that solves the haulage problem at a very small operating and upkeep expense. Hence the demand for the Ford One-Ton Truck is constantly on the increase.

For the good of your business, whether it be farming, merchandising or manufacturing, you should come in and look over the Ford One-Ton Truck—NOW!

IMPORTANT

We are prepared to furnish the Ford Truck equipped either with Standard or Special Gearing. The Standard Gearing gives the truck a maximum of power. The Special Gearing increases the speed of the truck from five to seven miles an hour, converting it into a Fast Delivery Car.

I might add, I do not know of any bond paying even 8% that is in this class as an investment security, as they are a long term bond, valuable conversion privilege, this security is much preferable, in my judgment, to any foreign Government Bonds. The assets of this company on January 10, 1921, was over one hundred and eighty millions of dollars, and the total reserves and surplus on October 10, 1921, were over fifty millions. This company has outstanding seventy-seven millions of cumulative preferred stock, three million four hundred thousand 6% preferred, and forty-six million three hundred and ninety-nine thousand of common stock. All these stocks paying dividends. These bonds as a security are ahead of all of this stock: the earnings of the Debenture are over seven times the interest requirements on all 7% convertible Gold Debentures part of which I am offering on sale now.

To induce hens to lay more eggs in the Winter time an interesting experiment is being tried by a Manchester, England, breeder. He is illuminating his coops with acetylene lamps because of the short period of daylight. The photo shows the lamps and some of the hens the breeder hopes to fool by the artificial light.

It's a strange custom they practice in England on the induction of a mayor into office. Whether it is part of the old adage, "Weighed and found wanting," or whether it is a desire to see how much weight the mayor will put on during his term of office, it is difficult to understand, but nevertheless the fact remains that in some parts of England it is still part of the inaugural ceremonies to weigh the incoming mayor. The photo shows Mayor G. H. Taylor being duly weighed, according to the ancient custom.

Simple Remedy for Drowsiness.

Drowsiness in church is often caused by poor ventilation. Try to choose a seat where fresh air is assured. To keep awake in church when inclined to be drowsy, lift one foot a little away from the floor and keep it there. It is impossible to go to sleep with the foot poised in the air. This simple remedy is very effectual.

Reindeer's Skin Valuable.

Not only is the reindeer prized highly for its flesh, but the skins are valuable for glove-making. Tanned with the hair on, they are very light, and robes made from the soft tanned skins with the hair on are for weight probably by far the warmest covering known. These might become extremely useful as automobile robes for winter in colder parts of the country.

Simple Rule to Remember.

When should "fewer" be used, and when should "less"? Is it correct, for example, to say "I have no 'less' than 100 bushels"? The rule to avoid this common mistake is to remember that fewer is used when referring to numbers—as in the above example—and less when referring to quantity.

Here is the jury of thirteen that will try Roscoe ("Fatty") Arbuckle. Those standing are (left to right): Bailiff Harry McGovern and the following jurors—Alternate Stephen E. Hopkins, Henry J. Reef, Thomas Kilkenny, Mrs. Kitty McDonald, Miss Louise R. Winterburn, Mrs. Helen F. Hubbard (who indicated an aversion to being photographed), and William H. Torpey. Seated: Mrs. Adeline M. Nelson, Clarence C. Sayre, Arthur H. Crane, Mrs. Dorothy B. O'Dea, August Fritze and John J. H. Dierks.

Glass Eggs for Bad Singers.

Friend of ours has discovered a new use for wornout electric-light bulbs. They are excellent, he says, to break up nocturnal feline concerts. One flung out of the window will, with the resultant explosion, scatter the performers and insure peace for the night. —Boston Transcript.

MAKE ODD WILLS

Many Freakish Documents Filed for Probate.

One Drawn at the Time of the "Black Plague" Placed in a Bottle of Spirits.

All wills for which probate is granted are filed in Somerset House. They can be inspected by the public on the payment of a fee. The only exception to the above rule applies to the wills of the king and queen of England, which are kept in the records but are sealed.

Almost every day the principal probate registry office has to deal with wills of original construction.

One of the most recent was the portrait of a pretty girl upon which the testator had simply written, "I leave all to her." The legator, a soldier, had duly signed it, and affidavits of identity being forthcoming, the will was admitted to probate and filed in the archives of Somerset House.

A quaint will, yet these same archives contain others just as fanciful and some that are remarkable for their historical interest.

One of this collection, interesting from a medical point of view, was made by an unfortunate who died of the black plague that raged at one time in London. This will was placed in a bottle filled with spirits and then corked.

A precaution, no doubt, to preserve his majesty's law officers, who would have subsequently to handle it in the course of their duties, from infection by the deadly bacilli.

Another will is in shorthand. Considering its date, somewhere round the year 1760, this is not a little remarkable, for the well-known cipher invented by the famous Mr. Pitman saw the light of day over a hundred years later.

Luckily the testator left a key, else the authorities would have been put to no little trouble to decipher it, for shorthand was unknown in those days.

A will salvaged from the bottom of the sea supplies the nautical interest. This will was recovered after a long period of immersion, and the only damage it received was in the way of shrinkage.

It was made on parchment, and this when fished up was found to have shrunk to about a tenth its normal size. But so beautifully had it been inscribed that the writing remains as clear as print to this day, and though very minute it can be read easily with the naked eye.

Another quaint, though cumbersome record is the leg of a four-poster bed. The will of a certain earl was hidden in a recess at the top of this leg, and as there was a dispute over the grant of probate the leg and its large wooden castor had to be filed and kept as evidence.

Shakespeare's will with its remarkable signature, Nelson's will written in a common or garden exercise book on the eve of Trafalgar, and which toward the conclusion contains these words, "The enemy are now in sight ——," a soldier's will made in a black-covered note book through which a bullet has passed without making it illegible—these and many more go to make a collection that many a curio hunter would give his soul to possess.—Solicitor in London Daily Mail.

Canada Has No National Flag.

Canada has no national flag. A so-called Canadian flag is in use, but its use is unauthorized, and it no longer represents Canada. It is the red ensign of the British mercantile marine with the coat-of-arms of Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick in a quartered shield on the field of the flag.

This flag, by warrant dated February 2, 1892, was authorized by the British admiralty "to be used on board vessels registered in the Dominion." This limits its domain to Canadian merchant ships, as no authorization was given to fly it on shore. When it is flown on land it is out of its formal jurisdiction. In any case it has not been formally adopted by the Canadian people, and it now has decided limitations. Its shield contains the devices of only four of the nine provinces which now form the Dominion of Canada.

Joke on the Bank.

Woman's limited knowledge of banking and money matters has long been the subject for jokes on the stage and elsewhere. The story of the woman who believed that because she still had blank checks in her check-book she still had plenty of money in the bank is an old one. But the other day an Indianapolis woman was notified that her account had been overdrawn and instead of accepting the bank's stereotyped invitation to "come in at your earliest convenience and attend to the matter," she chose a new method of procedure. The bank received the following letter from the woman: "Please find inclosed a check for $12.72 to settle my account."

The Symptoms.

"Was Mr. Grabcoin in his office when you called?"

"No, he must have been playing golf."

"Are you sure about that?"

"Reasonably sure. The office force seemed to think he wouldn't be back soon. Most of the clerks had their feet up on their desks and three stenographers were making 'dates' by telephone."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Foolish to Discount Oneself.

Every acquired habit is an asset or a liability that will contribute toward what you are going to be. A great many folks discount themselves before the first struggle that would give them opportunities.

ONE THING MISSIONARY KNEW

And the Knowledge Enabled Him to Score a Direct Hit Off the Bullying Skipper.

Bishop Mitchell said the other day: "Missionaries are a good deal derided and reviled since the World war. Why try to convert the heathen, people cry, when we're still so unregenerate ourselves?

"A Methodist missionary was traveling in a steamer along the west coast of Africa. The skipper kept making fun of him. The idea of his trying to better the heathen! Why not first better his own people—get them to stop using poison gas and all that sort of thing? Missionaries were no good, anyway. An ignorant, lazy lot.

"The missionary stood a good deal of this talk, and then one day at dinner he said to the skipper:

"'We missionaries are ignorant, and you, of course, know a great deal. Sailing these African waters so many years, I suppose you can tell me the length of an alligator's tongue?'

"'Sure I can!' blustered the skipper. 'Surest thing you know!'

"'Well, then, what is it?'

"'It depends,' said the skipper, 'on the length of the alligator.'

"'All right. Suppose the alligator is 15 feet long?'

"The skipper looked around the table. All the passengers bent forward, deeply interested in this lingual duel—this tongue battle, so to speak.

"'If the alligator's 15 feet long,' the skipper said, 'it's tongue will be three feet long.'

"'Wrong!' said the missionary, calmly. 'I'm only an ignorant missionary, but I know that alligators don't have tongues.'"—Detroit Free Press.

SPREAD WARNING OF STORMS

Stockmen Notified of Coming Unfavorable Weather Conditions in Time to Take Precautions.

Cold waves, heavy snows, high winds and blizzards vitally interest the stock growers of the great range states of the West. The weather bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture, in its endeavor to assist the stockmen, issues warnings of these unfavorable conditions which are dangers to farm animals and to those who graze on the range. These warnings are widely distributed by telegraph and telephone to large centers, but further dissemination devolves on those interested. The problem has been largely solved in some of the states, particularly Missouri, by telegraphing the warning to one central point in each county, where arrangements are made to telephone information of the warnings to each community interested.

When a warning is received stockmen arrange to graze their stock near shelter, or in such a direction from shelter that the stock will drift toward it when the anticipated severe weather comes. A modification of this service consists of sheep-shearing and lambing forecasts and warnings. In early shearing and lambing districts shearing is delayed or newly shorn sheep, ewes and young lambs are kept near suitable shelter, such as coulees, where they will receive protection when wind, snow or cold rains are expected.

Drove Popular Author Too Hard.

At a recent autograph sale in New York were several letters from O. Henry, written in the beginning of his last illness. He was always dilatory about his work and tried the patience of editors. At the last they did not understand that they were urging him beyond his strength. In one of these letters he writes:

"You are sure using plenty of 'sarkassum' on me these days. I don't see why you should think I am lying about my illness. I can show you a doctor's bill that may restore a little of your confidence in human nature. I have had a bad case of nervous insomnia as I ever want to have, and the doctor has been trying to get me sleep and relief. The telephone and all my other friends were cut off for that purpose. I got some sleep last night by the free use of sulphonol and I feel some better today. . . . My work is all gone to the devil. I am lost in a wilderness of past-due stories, but I will pull out soon."

Roadless Russia.

Russia is almost a roadless land. It is inconceivable to the foreign visitor who has ever left the beaten track of the railways in Russia how a great empire can have subsisted so long and so successfully without even a pretense at roads. The secret lies in the fact that for five or six months in the year nature herself provides roads over the greater part of Russia—admirable smooth, glossy roadways over hard-worn snow. The traffic is further cheapened over these roads by the substitution of a sledge runner for the wheel and axle. This brings the cost of land carriage as near the cheapness of water-borne freight as possible, and it is the principal reason why Russia in the Twentieth century is still a roadless land.

Tropical Fish Off Jersey.

James E. Taylor, while fishing off Cape May, N. J., a short time ago, ran into a shoal of pompano, a fish that never has been found outside of tropical waters. Taylor and his son caught nearly 300 of them. Fishermen say that pompano bring as high as $1.20 a pound in southern markets. Old inhabitants say it is a sure sign of a mild winter, as tropical fish are never caught this late north of Norfolk.

Ingenious and Economical.

A hand-operated tram running on a rail suspended from the cornice of a building is a device used for window cleaning of buildings of large window area. This device, which also can be used for painting, replaces more expensive scaffolding.

The More the Merrier.

Pyle inn and Tumble inn are two hotels in New Jersey.

Light Lost by Dirt.

The value of clean lamps and lamp fixtures is not generally appreciated, and so the dust and soil is often allowed to rest upon them undisturbed for a long time. Attention to this matter was recently shown by test to result in an increase of one-third in the amount of illumination in a factory. After the demonstration it was decided by the owners to employ a man to give his attention to cleaning the lamps and renewing them when they get to the inefficient stage.

FIRE DESTROYS PESSENAR CAMP

Fire of unknown origin totally destroyed the summer camp of Joseph S Pessenar at Brodheads Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Pessenar estimates his loss at about $7,000, which is only partially covered by insurance.

The camp, which was of the bungalow type containing eleven rooms with all modern improvements, was occupied by Lieutenant Buchanan Egbert of the New York police force, his two sons and two other friends of Mr. Pessenar. They had gone to the camp on Monday expecting to spend a week there. They were accompanied by Mr. Pessenar who spent Monday night there and returned to his hotel on Railroad avenue Tuesday morning.

That afternoon the party went for an auto ride around the Ashokan reservoir, and when they returned they found the building in ruins. The fire was first discovered by Mr Beesmer, who is employed by Mr. Pessenar, and he notified the latter who hurried to the scene.

Lack of water facilities made it impossible for the neighbors in the vicinity to prevent the spread of flames.

There was a fire in the big fire place in the banqueting room, but before the party had gone for the auto ride they had extinguished the fire. One theory is that the fire may have been caused by a spark from the fire place which had been overlooked in caring for the fire.

The building had only recently been completed by Mr. Pessenar. The past summer the Shriners' clam bake was held there, and also the banquet of the Colonial A. C. which brought the local baseball season to a close.
